Leaders Have Been 'Crucified' By Tory Party

VICTORIA, July 7.—(CP)—

The Conservative party has "crucified" several of its outstanding leaders, Hon. Eric Willis, minister of public works in Manitoba's coalition government, declared in an address to a Progressive Conservative meeting here last night, and added: "Don't crucify John Bracken," present party leader.

"Once we thought we had to have a 'crucifixion' of Willis," said Mr. Bracken. "But Willis said: 'I am not a man who speaks the language of the common people and so I say, you know that Mr. Bennett (now Lord Bennett) was largely crucified by the Conservatives."

'KICKED OUT MANION'

"Next we wanted a man who had the common touch. We got Dr. Manion (the late Dr. Manion) and he was kicked out. He was crucified by the Conservative party."

"Today we have John Bracken who more than any of the rest is a man who speaks the language of the common people and so I say, 'No please don't crucify John Bracken.'"

Mr. Willis said Mr. Bracken, former premier of Manitoba, "will be the prime minister if we choose to make him such" and said if the party gets down to business and deals with live issues, "we are bound to win."

Have no fear of this (Mr. Bracken's) ability to take care of himself," Mr. Willis said. "When, as we see in right, the British Empire starts Mr. King (Prime Minister King) won't even know who's got the ball."

Urges Changes In Veterans' Allowance Act

OTTAWA, July 7.—(CP)—Improvements in the war veterans' allowance act and its extension to veterans of imperial forces who served in an actual theatre of war and to all Canadian veterans were urged yesterday upon the House Commons social security committee in a brief from the Canadian Legion.

While the executive committee of the organization put itself on record as favoring a broad system of social security for Canada, it stressed the interest of veterans of former wars and prospective veterans of the present war. The brief was read by Lt. Col. W. C. Nicholson of Montreal, Dominion vice-president.

BRIEF FROM BLIND
The committee also heard representatives of the Canadian Federation of the Blind, led by Gilbert Layton of Montreal, submit a brief urging increases in blind pensions, removal of the present limitation on blind persons to persons aged 40 years of age, and special provisions for treatment of and prevention of blindness under a national health insurance system.

The Legion brief said the present rate of War Veterans' allowances is inadequate to provide for the necessities of life for veterans no longer able to work. The limitation of the allowance to men who served in an actual theatre of war should be removed, the brief said.

In urging extension of the act to Imperial Veterans, the brief said that had these men remained in the United Kingdom they would have received benefits under British social legislation, that these benefits were available to Canadian veterans living in the United Kingdom.

CONTINUE METHOD

"We believe that this method of taking care of the veteran in old age should be continued, notwithstanding any social security measures that may be provided for non-veterans," said the brief.

"A man who has borne arms for his country in time of war should receive more generous treatment in the country's social security plans than others."

In approving a system of "compulsory" contributory national health insurance, the Legion said many veterans for years to come would be entitled to treatment from the department of pension and health. Mr. Nicholson said the Legion did not wish these merged into the health insurance system.

1 Killed, 15 Hurt As Trains Collide

MONTMAGNY, Que., July 7.—(CP)—One trainman was killed and 15 persons suffered injuries when the westbound Canadian National Railways Maritime Express collided head on yesterday with a freight train on the bridge over the Montmagny river here.

The dead trainman is Joseph Levesque of nearby Riviere Du Loup, Que., who was on the freight. Most of those hurt suffered head injuries, none of them being serious. A broken axle of the freight suffered a broken leg.

The collision occurred at 3:30 p.m. on the bridge just outside the station of Montmagny which is 30 miles east of Quebec.

The two locomotives went 15 feet into the air after the impact and the limited limped into the shallow river. Fifteen cars and loads of the freight also spilled into the river and landed in a twisted mass of metal and coal.

Japanese Reduce Air Training Time As Losses Mount

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—An indication of Japan's severe losses in the air came last night from Tokyo radio, which broadcast an announcement that the training period for Japanese air cadets has been cut from three to two years. The "Asahi" reported by United Press. Japanese military and naval sources who pass health examinations are being commissioned as air force second lieutenants in 18 months.

Engine-less Craft Flown 3,200 Miles by R.A.F. Part of Cargo for Russia

A revolutionary world's flight record was established recently when an R.A.F. transport command plane towed a glider loaded with freight across the Atlantic from Canada to England. The first air train to span the Atlantic, or any other ocean, the glider and its tow plane flew 3,200 miles in 28 hours.

With a full crew the glider carried a maximum load of war freight, including approximately a ton of vaccine for Russia, crates of aircraft, radio sets and spare parts for tanks.

Crew of the towing plane were R.A.F. pilot, Flight-Lieut. W. S. Longhurst of Montreal; co-pilot and navigator, Flight-Lieut. C. W. H. Thomson, R.A.F. of Toronto; New Zealand Pilot Officer R. W. Wormington, R.A.F. flight engineer of St. John's, Newfoundland; Radio Officer H. Gordon Wright, R.A.F. Transport Command, of Vancouver, B.C.; Wing Commander H. Furner, R.A.F., engineering officer of the Atlantic Group of the Transport Command travelling in the plane in a supervisory capacity.

Crew of the glider were S-Ldr. R. G. Seys, D.F.C., R.A.F. pilot of Montreal; S-Ldr. F. M. Gobeil, R.C.A.F., co-pilot of Ottawa and Montreal.

The flight was made to obtain information on which to base research and development branch of the R.A.F. Transport Command can proceed with its investigation of the possibilities of ultimate military or commercial air train service over the Atlantic.

Experiments leading up to the flight began in Canada about five months ago. The glider used for the experiments and the flight was an old four-engine transport plane, G-1, designed by an aircraft firm and built by a plane manufacturer. The towing plane was a twin-engine Douglas D-3.

The tow rope used between the glider and the plane was made of 100 yards of nylon with a 7,000 pound breaking strength. It cost $400.

Flights in Canada were made in one of the worst weather known in North America for fifty years. Wind and mist flying experiments were carried out.

British Endorse Aims of Greeks

LONDON, July 7.—(AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that the British government endorsed the postwar aims of the Greek government, outlined by King George VI of Greece in a broadcast from Cairo Sunday.

The monarch told the Greek people that as soon as it was possible for the government in London to return to Greece all its members would resign in order that a fully representative government could be chosen which would guarantee "freedom and orderliness of elections."

Calling the speech a "far-sighted announcement," Mr. Eden said that "it provides for the constitutional aims of Greek political institutions in accordance with the principles of democracy and the Atlantic Charter."

At Next Session

Complete B.N.A. Act Study By Senate Group Proposed

OTTAWA, July 7.—(CP)—Appointment of a Senate committee at the next session of parliament to make a complete study of the British North America Act was proposed in the Upper House last night by Senator John Haig (Prog. Can. Manitoba).

Senator Haig spoke in the debate on a resolution to defer distribution of parliament representation on the basis of the 1941 census. The resolution was approved by the Commons Monday night.

Senator J. H. King, government senate leader, in introducing the resolution said the matter was one in which the Senate was not directly concerned and as the members of the elected representation in parliament had approved of it the Senate might well concur.

Senator C. C. Ballantyne, Progressive-Conservative leader in the Red Chamber, asked that a protest registered by the Quebec legislature be tabled.

TO MAKE ENQUIRIES
Senator King said he would make enquiries but the content of both the Dominion and Quebec governments would be required.

Senator C. P. Beaudry (Prog. Can. Quebec) said the resolution was one of the most important that could come before the House.

"We're changing the representation of parliament as it was agreed to by the Fathers of Confederation," he said.

"Only delaying," Senator King interrupted.

"If an election took place tomorrow it might change it," Senator Beaudry replied. An senator, he added, was "in the lap of the gods and the government."

Military, Political Danger Serious Threat Is Seen in Nazis' Third Summer Russian Offensive

Henry C. Cassidy, chief of the Associated Press bureau in Moscow, has watched twice while the Germans tried to hammer down the Russian army without success. Planning his own return to Moscow, he says he will get there—but that the "Nazis' last ditch work" is EDITOR.

BY HENRY C. CASSIDY
NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—The German third summer offensive against Russia, although later than its predecessors and more limited in scope, can still present a strong threat to the Soviet Union and to the United Nations. The dangers are double—military and political.

Militarily, the Wehrmacht can make a powerful effort to drain at least some of the offensive strength out of the Red Army before the Germans are confronted by second line front in Europe.

Potentially, the new strain imposed upon the Soviet Union is renewing Russian anxiety over the absence of that second front, and may well bring to a head a fresh crisis among the United Nations.

TREMENDOUS TARGET
The military target is a tremendous one. On the basis of Soviet estimates of the population, or 13,000,000 men, the Red Army still has 15,000,000 men, almost four times as many as have been lost, a huge reservoir of defensive—and offensive—power.

The political question can not be over-emphasized. For the editorial campaign for a second front, already arising in Russia, may exceed last year's polemics.

Which brought Prime Minister Winston Churchill to Moscow. The victory in Tunisia, in Russian eyes, can not compensate for another year of waiting for another front in Europe.

The offensive, however, is not too late to be serious. Two full months of hot, dry weather—the conditions most favorable to German operations—has ahead before the September rains come. That is time enough for the still-potent Wehrmacht to do a lot of damage.

PLAN BREAK-THROUGH
The immediate German objective as it was a year ago, appears to be a break-through on a comparatively narrow front, followed by a swift, knife thrust into the depth of the Soviet defenses. Days or weeks of fighting would be required to force a path through the dense Russian lines, if such a path can be made.

Which way the Germans would then turn remains their own military secret. Their logical course, if they hope to engage the bulk of the Red army, would be north toward Moscow, or by-passing the capital.

To the British soldier, a "financing" is a German anti-aircraft projectile.

R.A.F. Intruder "Time Signal" For Berliners

LONDON, July 7.—(CP)—Berlin residents eat timpanies by a single Royal Air Force intruder plane that for several weeks appeared punctually over the city at 2:00 a.m. said a Stockholm news dispatch to London.

Although the plane dropped no bombs, it had a great nuisance value until Berlin officials decided that it was an intruder. Before the Germans sent thousands racing for shelters, and other thousands to their air and guns. That meant much loss of sleep.

Canadian Airmen Serving Overseas Win Decorations

THE GERMAN ASPECT (Cont'd)

While the defensive strategy of Germany seems clear, the scene of new offensives will be decidedly against the German High Command. Our previous conclusion was that countries now neutral than more useful for the Germans in a state of neutrality than as objects of a German attack. Therefore Sweden, Spain, and Portugal, as well as Turkey, are likely to be left alone. With the Germans driven out of Tunisia, Africa cannot again become a scene for German offensive operations.

It is an important battle for the Allies could possibly be attacked from Norway with the aid of a major part of the German fleet. But if the occupation army there is vigilant, such an attempt would have little chance and Germany would suffer serious naval losses. Nor is the objective—the gaining of additional naval bases—important enough for Germany to warrant the risks of an operation against this island. So there remain only two objectives for future German offensives: Russia and the British Isles. The Germans must realize that the British Isles are a major part of their line of defense. The British Isles are a major part of their line of defense. The British Isles are a major part of their line of defense.

So there remain only two objectives for future German offensives: Russia and the British Isles. The Germans must realize that the British Isles are a major part of their line of defense. The British Isles are a major part of their line of defense. The British Isles are a major part of their line of defense.

REMAINING OBJECTIVE
The only other remaining objective for future German attacks is the British Isles. It is unlikely that such an invasion could have any success, but at least it could reduce British industrial production in a very large extent, interrupt the Allied war machine for a

PRIVATE BREGER ABROAD

"I understand he filled it with helium!"

portance, it would be useless, with the constant risk of being caught by superior British forces in the same way that the Bismarck was caught and sunk. But used as a whole in any German offensive action, so in a counter-offensive at the time of an Allied invasion, it would be a most formidable weapon, particularly since the Allied navies, with their manifold tasks all around the world, would not easily be in a position to send an adequately strong force against it. Remembering what happened in the last war, the Germans will certainly not go on to the bitter and without making a desperate win-or-lose attempt to use this tremendous force in one big operation.

POSSIBLE EXPLANATIONS
There are several possible explanations. One is that the Germans want to build up tremendous reserves for a final offensive, either against Russia or, more likely, against the British Isles. If that is true, they are forced to play games and gasoline for the ultimate defensive action. Such reserves might also be held for a surprise offensive, once the Allies are ready for the final blow.

THE ACTIONS OF THE GERMAN
The actions of the German High Command since Montgomery's victorious advance through Libya have been very mysterious. The weakness of the Luftwaffe as an offensive weapon, particularly since the Allied bombers over the western coast of Germany, and the slight German aggressiveness over England could lead to the conclusion that the Axis had definitely lost the war in the air. While it is certain that Allied numerical and qualitative superiority will grow and that German production has not changed again, it is not optimistic about this favorable situation.

FIGURES EXAGGERATED
Before the war and in its early stages we heard of German airplane production figures as anywhere from twenty-five hundred to three thousand per month. This did not include tank production. It is very probable that these figures were greatly exaggerated because at that time Germany was trying, with considerable success, to frighten the world in general, and the then neutral countries in particular, by an exaggerated picture of German air power. These figures, as we must conclude now, could never have been true. If they had been, the losses of German planes as published by Allied

Churchill Sees Victory Ahead

LONDON, July 7.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill last night told China's Gen. Chiang Kai-shek in a message observing the sixth anniversary of the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese conflict, July 7, that the victory in North Africa and elsewhere on the ground was "a tangible evidence in the east and west of what is to come."

Churchill said that "colossal difficulties" he said to be overcome, but that the "patience of events is now becoming clear. Initiative is being won from the grasp of the enemy and we can look forward with confident hope to the time when all over the world the aggressors are driven to unconditional surrender."

Action Is Urged On Racial Issue

WILLIAMSBAY, N.S., July 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada have been asked by the Christian Youth Council of North America to "speak out clearly in the near future concerning racial tensions which are threatening the very values we seek to preserve."

At a biennial meeting which closed Monday, 190 representatives from 20 Protestant denominations, 15 other churches and eight other cooperating organizations "spoke out clearly in the near future concerning racial tensions which are threatening the very values we seek to preserve."

The president of the American Contract Bridge League in 1941 was Robert T. Gill. As soon as we got into the war, the league has been with General McKenney in the last war, closed his house in Baltimore and got back into the game. He is now Lieutenant-Colonel Gill, stationed at Fort St. Vrain, Va.

With this somewhat exaggerated picture in mind the German leaders might well feel that if they are successful with a defensive strategy interrupted from time to time by powerful local offensive actions, and if they can prolong the war for a few more years, this apparent lack of complete understanding among the Allies might develop into a rift between Russia and her allies, with a chance that Germany can arrange a truce in the near future after a long period of defensive warfare. Fortunately, recent developments make it evident that there is little possibility of such hopes being fulfilled.

City Crossroads of World McConachie's Dream of Air Bridge to Asia Now Only Awaits War's End for Realization

The men who are planning the post-war routes of aerial transportation are Edmonton, Alberta, as an applied center of the world. In this article of a series by British Columbia's "The World" Editor G. H. Waring, the reasons for the city's selection as a vital link in the chain of Pacific defenses is a climax to the work of McConachie's team.

A decade ago a young western Canadian bush pilot had a dream—a dream of an air bridge to Asia. Today Grant McConachie's dream awaits only the war's end to make it an actuality.

McConachie started building the Canadian end of that bridge in 1934. At the time it was impossible to underestimate. Particularly after the opening of hostilities in the Pacific, the need for a direct route of supplies to the northwestern coast of Alaska and Alaska itself was a vital link in the chain of Pacific defenses is a climax to the work of McConachie's team.

The fledgling company carried new equipment and supplies, in brought out men, furs and previous equipment, and applied to the government for a license to operate.

The present chain of large modern aircraft through Alaska and British Columbia to Alaska—Alaska's "The World" Editor G. H. Waring, the reasons for the city's selection as a vital link in the chain of Pacific defenses is a climax to the work of McConachie's team.

The main route, from Edmonton in Fairbanks, Alaska—has an emergency landing field at 100-mile intervals between the airports. Flares are lit by radio beam, a far cry from the waist-patented flying of the men who pioneered the route.

Like most Canadians, I've had the urge to help get this war won—but how? The army turned me down, so I just stuck along at my old job (and it wasn't essential war work)—but I've been a reader of the Help Wanted columns of the paper ever since I got my first job—and the thought struck me that with all these essential jobs that are crying for men, that I'd just look for a war job for the duration—and my old firm wants me back when they get back to peacetime production.
